Prerequisites	A good knowledge of the Greek language is requested. The working path can be supported by a basic culture on the material structure of the codex, guaranteed by the class "Archeologia del libro manoscritto".
Learning outcomes	The class provides the basic knowledge of the Greek handwriting history, from its origin to the humanistic age. It joins the evolution of the graphical forms to the wider history of written culture in the society, as well as the ability of reading and critically evaluating the Greek handwriting over the many phases and typologies of its course.
Course contents	Brief summary of the greek handwriting from IV century to the humanistic age, with particular emphasis to the canonized handwriting and to the styles and graphical types of the Greek-oriental and Southern Italian areas. Reading from the most significant greek manuscripts and deeper insight of codicological elements, forms of signature, abbreviations, byzantine chronology, illumination.

Teaching methods	The class will be divided in theoretical and practical lessons. During the theoretical lessons, the student will be explained the evolution of the Greek handwriting in its outline. During the practice, with the aid of facsimiles, he or she will get the necessary tools to decipher both the majuscule and the minuscule handwriting, and to set it correctly in space and time. The classroom activity also includes the discussion on the texts indicated in bibliography and on other material given by the teacher.
